National Savings Institute

President
Republic of India

I am delighted to learn that the World Thrift Day is being observed on October 30, 2007. Mobilisation of resources through the various small savings schemes have not only helped in inculcating the habit of thrift and savings among all sections of society, they have also contributed greatly in raising resources for the economic development of the country. On the occasion of World Thrift Day, I extend my best wishes to all organizations engaged in the noble effort of empowering the masses by bringing them into the organized financial system through the various small savings schemes of the Government.

I wish the World Thrift Day celebrations all success.

(Pratibha Devisingh Patil)

Prime Minister

I am happy to know that the World Thrift Day is being observed on 30th October, 2007. The observance of the World Thrift Day must be accompanied by greater efforts to foster the habit of thrift among all sections of society. Thriftiness teaches us to be more modest and restrained in using scarce resources. As Gandhiji said, there is great merit in simple living and high thinking I compliment the National Savings Institute and all other agencies for inculcating among people the value of savings and serving the larger goal of nation building. I wish the celebrations associated with the World Thrift Day all success.

(Manmohan Singh)

Finance Minister

World Thrift Day is being celebrated across the nation on 30th October, 2007. It is a day to renew our pledge and strengthen our efforts for promoting the habit of thrift and saving among all citizens of our country in recognition of the fact that financial savings provide the resources for long term investments that benefit the economy and stimulate development. Sustaining the flow of savings at the macro level is of utmost importance for maintaining stable conditions for economic growth. It should be endeavor of all agencies engaged in the mobilization of savings to ensure that the savings movement is taken to the farthest corners, particularly in the rural and remote areas, to increase public awareness, the number of investors and the resources mobilized under the various small saving schemes of the Government of India.

I extend my best wishes for the success of all the activities being undertaken by the agencies concerned to mark this occasion.

(P. Chidambaram)

Minister of State for Finance

Banking and Micro-finance experience across the world suggests the power of thrift in generating the resources necessary for economic growth especially through investment in infrastructure projects. Thrift also introduces people at the disadvantaged end of socio-economic spectrum to the formal financial sector. Thrift also naturally encourages social organization through Self-Help Groups, thereby forming the basis for potential future micro-entrepreneurship. Focus on thrift is therefore, a focus on financial inclusion. It is therefore, the day of all citizens and financial institutions to encourage thrift through financial literacy programmes, facilitation by providing easy access and integration of small savings into their overall strategy.

I am happy to learn that World Thrift Day celebrations are being held all over the country on 30th October. I hope the occasion would be used to reemphasize the importance of thrift in the nation's economic life.
